WELCOME . . .

We invite you to travel with us on an excursion of academic fulfillment, athletic triumph and exuberance of spirit. Chicago State has much to offer and even more to explore . . .

Mr. & Ms. CSU Pageant

One of the Highlights of Homecoming Week 1985 was the long awaited Mr. & Ms. CSU Pageant. The honor of being crowned Mr. & Ms. CSU was bestowed upon Darren Bolden and Sharron Kennerly, Bolden a Computer Science major defeated Antonio Smith. Kennerly, also a Computer Science major defeated freshman Stacy Arrington. Among the several categories in which the contestants were judged included poise and confidence. Moreover, the candidates were judged upon their ability to exude grace and talent as well as exceptional creativity and ingenuity.

(L to R) Brandon D. Arnold, Former Mr. CSU; Lori A. Crawford, Former Ms. CSU; Dr. Edward Eddy, Dean of Student Development; Sharron Kennerly, 1985 Ms. CSU; Darren Bolden, 1985 Mr. CSU; Sebastian Williams, President of SGA

Runner up Ms. CSU, Stacy Arrington

Runner up Mr. CSU, Antonio Smith

CHICAGO STATE UNIVERSITY COUGARS

This year our CSU Cougars proved once again that we had the right to be named among the best college teams in the country. Their dazzling performance caused some of the photographers to do double takes. Not only did we dominate the boards, we left our opponents gasping for breath.

ACADEMICS

The curriculum at C.S.U. offers a variety of programs for people of all ages and walks of life. The programs range from Anthropology to Zoology and each department regularly has on going projects. The entire community is invited to share in the various experiences, many leading to degrees in various fields . . .

Will you be next to join us?

Fashions in Focus

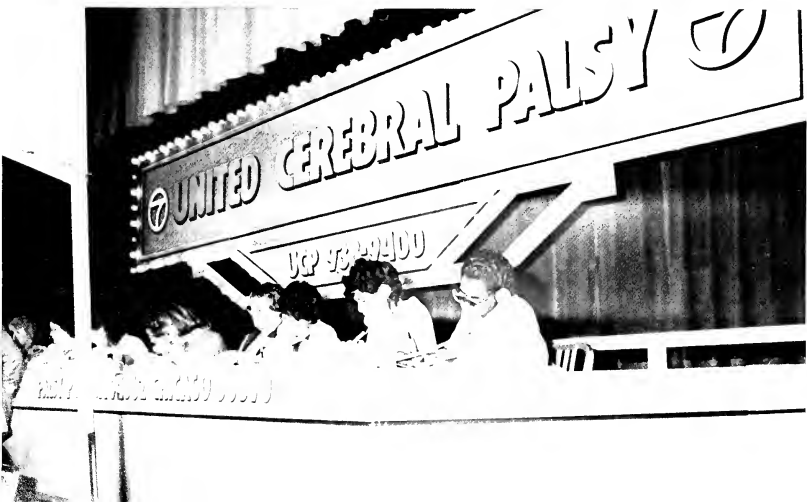

CSU models participated in a host of on and off campus fashion shows, ranging from world hunger benefits to entertaining the campus community. Members of our modeling club represented the students at a recent fund raiser for Ethiopian children who are struggling to survive in Africa.

CSU FOR UCP

The 1985 United Cerebral Palsy Telethon convened from Saturday January 19th thru Sunday, January 20th at the Medinah Temple. Representing Chicago State University were Lori Crawford, Sheila Coleman, Carol Coleman, and other CSU students who functioned as telephone operators and recorded the contributions pledged to facilitate further research of Cerebral Palsy.

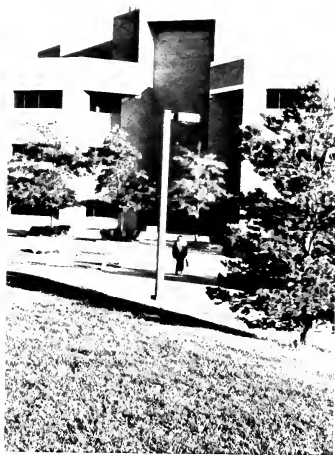

Like one of the special gowns at the Telethon, Miss Wintre's hair is styled in a "Charm" by the styling team. "AM CHICAGO" Miss Wintre is one of the most highly spirited female talk-show hostesses on a major network television station. Her unique flair for addressing the most controversial issues facing today's society has won the hearts of thousands of Americans.

Below, Ivy Kapsner, noted for "Kaps' Column" in the CHICAGO SUN-TIMES, shares some last minute details with Miss Wintre.

On a typical day at CSU one can witness various sights such as the R.O.T.C. Color Guard posting Colors in front of the Cook Administration building. While students are attending classes in the Daniel Hale Williams Science Building or studying in the Paul-Emily Douglas Library; two of the buildings that epitomize the institution's beauty.

Note the children playing gleefully in the child care center playground, with expressions of contentment and happiness, while their parents go about the business of getting an education.

HISTORY OF CHICAGO STATE UNIVERSITY

Chicago State University's history began over a century ago. Higher Education in Chicago dates back to 1832 when Richard J. Hamilton, a city commissioner and property owner donated a twelve-foot square log stable north of the Chicago river to the public interests for educational purposes. A very special woman by the name of Eliza Choppell received the first money from the Chicago School Fund back in 1834. As time went on, the school enrollment began to increase and there were never enough seats. Consequently, rooms and buildings were rented. Between 1837 and 1847 there were 818 scholars enrolled and only 8 teachers under contract. In 1869, the twenty-six acre campus was located in a rural environment which over the past century had changed successively to a suburban and by 1960 to an urban area of high density with 100 percent black residents. In 1966 a search had been made for a new location for the college. Places that were within the area bounded by 63rd, Stony Island, 101st street, and Kedzie Avenue. Later the Roseland area was considered, but eventually not used. In 1961 the general assembly in the State of Illinois established the present Board of Higher Education as a permanent coordinating, planning agency in the state. The Cook County Normal and the Chicago Teachers College changed names several times. The school had changed its role in life completely from that of a teacher-training institution to that of a multi-purpose university. It also changed racially as it changed its address. When Chicago State University moved to its new campus, it took with it a long tradition of service to the community and a history of strong achievement as a teacher-training institution. C.S.U. evolved from a box car on a railroad siding in the year 1867, to a 161 acre, $65 million campus in 1972. The new campus building nearly completed in Phase I of three proposed stages of development included two classroom tracts. These are the Daniel Hale Williams Science Center, the Paul and Emily Douglas Library, Physical Education complex, The Raymond Cook Administration building, the University Center building that served as a student union, and the Physical Plant building.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

August 1985

The richness of student life at Chicago State University and the challenges of your educational experiences are presented on these pages. They serve to remind us all where we have been. They also challenge us to imagine where we will be a decade from now. The Emblem represents a vision of the many professional and personal achievements yet to be realized. Enjoy these remembrances and continue to look toward the future in anticipation of new successes.

On behalf of the Chicago State University community, I express best wishes to all CSU students. We hope that in the moments when you reflect upon the things in life that have brought you fulfillment your time at Chicago State University will come to mind.

George E. Ayers

STUDENT

ACTIVITIES

Coordinating the University's student activities program requires a great deal of time, energy and ingenuity. One has to take into consideration the fact that the philosophy of what student activities encompass has changed tremendously over the last 10 years. For instance, at one point in time student activities could be simply defined as those extra-curricular activities that provided students an outlet from the rigors of coursework.

The present concept of student activities incorporates the philosophy that "education is the totality of one's experiences, both inside and outside the classroom." That is, student activities should augment the academic programs offered in any university setting. The total growth and development of the student becomes a priority to the extent that it becomes imperative that we move away from an archaic "let us entertain you" approach to one which emphasizes the need to enrich student life socially, culturally and intellectually. Sometimes the latter objective has to be accomplished in spite of the students as well as from them. Student activities must always be positive, motivational, stimulating, and at times allow students a healthy outlet for expression of their views (both positive and negative) of how they perceive the university.

Moving away from philosophy to administration of student activities, coordination of this facet of the university is directed through the Division of Student Affairs. Activities planned for this year include orientation for new students, senior undergraduate reception, student leadership workshop, mini lecture series, homecoming, Black Awareness Month, Cultural Awareness Week and mini-film series to name a few. In addition to the above, other activities are planned in conjunction with Student Government Association and various campus organizations to promote activities that are enriching to students, faculty and staff, and provide a positive image of the university to the surrounding community.

This yearbook staff noted that some students organizations pictures were received without their names. We assume they were either lost, misplaced or not sent to us. However, these organizations received funds from student activity fees and we want the students to receive a fair chance of getting the recognition they deserve. So listed below are recognized student organizations who did not pose for their 1985 student organization yearbook picture.

Students Study Everywhere

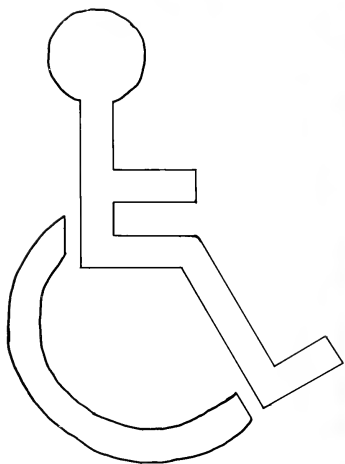

HEALTH FAIR

The Office of Student Development has made great strides in lending a supportive hand to students who have various disabilities. Many programs are in the formative stages and there is a need for continuous evaluation. We have used students without disabilities to simulate the various obstacles handicapped students may encounter on campus. This exercise not only makes other students aware but brings about concern and understanding of some of the students problems. Through this kind of information, feedback, and evaluation the administrator has taken the lead to establish programs and require equipment to assure quality education for those less fortunate. Current services offered to handicapped students are the provision of readers, note takers, and research helpers. The Office of Student Development is continually looking for ways to enhance student services. If you have any ideas or know something that might help us, let us know. We are always willing to listen.

HANDICAPPED SERVICES

"Being handicapped is one thing, but being handicapped and disabled is another. I am a left-armed amputee, who is blessed to have the rest of my limbs. Chicago State University has been a very positive experience. There are very few activities that I am restricted to. Adjusting to the university has not been difficult because the people on campus are warm and friendly, and the rapport with my instructors is good. Professors treat me the same as they treat all of the other students. I am expected to do my work and perform as well as my peers. The students and the staff are willing to assist me in any way they can. As I have proven to others and myself, most handicaps can be overcome successfully by being confident. When a person allows a physical disability to interfere with his mental capabilities he will generally handicap himself."

STRATEGIES CREATE A WINNER

Recycling of the Old into the New

University Intramural Sports is a field in transition. The impetus behind this move is a progressive commitment to recognizing and meeting the changing recreational needs and interest of today's heterogeneous student population. It has become the responsibility of Chicago State University to provide more campus recreation and to deliver more leisure services to the University Community. This shift in emphasis from the traditional sports orientation to students' activity which extends beyond the time spent in the classroom, laboratory, or library is to achieve a total learning environment through the optimum blend of formal academic activity, informal recreation, and leisure programs. Thus far, students at Chicago State University have requested and demanded the use of physical facilities when not in use for required programs, physical education, and athletics. The Athletics Department has responded by providing supervisors and free pool and gymnasium time to the student body and community at large. Chicago State University has accepted the challenge. Will you — the student and community at large — respond by supporting its program?

ACADEMICS

The 1984-85 year now concluding was one of progress and planning. It was a year of the development of already established programs and endeavors, the initiation of new ones, and the planning of future ones. Inactivity is by no means, the hallmark of Chicago State University, nor do we foresee the time when it will be. What we do foresee, however, is a continuation of the struggle to make opportunities to participate in higher education equitably available to all persons interested in them. In an effort to undermine this struggle, we are continually modifying our programs with offerings in response to the students' interests and community needs. Although this struggle is long and difficult, we will continue to look forward into our progressive future. The Division of Academic Affairs is comprised of five colleges.

THE COLLEGE OF ALLIED HEALTH, which currently offers five programs leading to a baccalaureate degree in one of the health professions, namely, Dietetics, Medical Records Administration, Occupational Therapy, Physical Therapy, and Radiation Therapy Technology, plans for the implementation of five additional programs during the next several years including master's degree programs in Medical Records Administration and Occupational Therapy.

THE COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCE, offers baccalaureate and master degree programs, and has more than 2,000 students majoring in its several departmental offerings; Computer Science, which had about 700 majors, was the program attracting the largest number of majors to the University. The International Program, developed by the Department of Economics and Political Science, which accommodated exchange students from such countries as Liberia, West Germany, and China, contribute greatly to the University's emphasis on international programs and involvements.

THE COLLEGE OF BUSINESS AND ADMINISTRATION, offers five programs leading to a baccalaureate degree to students majoring in Accounting, Finance, Management, Marketing, or Information Systems. In addition to instruction stimulated by resident and internationally renowned professors, students may participate in the Business Honors Laboratory Internship Program, a cooperative venture between Chicago State University and various governmental and business agencies, as well as international study tours. Additionally, the College is looking toward a master's degree program in the future.

THE COLLEGE OF EDUCATION, confers baccalaureate and master's degrees on its candidates enrolled in such areas as Curriculum and Instruction, Special Education, and Reading. The College, accredited by NCATE (National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education), prepares its students to teach in classroom as well as non-school settings. Another step toward increased international involvements was made when 40 students participated in a study tour in Puerto Rico offered by the Department of Curriculum and Instruction, involving the cooperation of the University of Puerto of the Chicago Board of Education.

THE COLLEGE OF NURSING, at Chicago State graduates more minority nurses at the bachelor's degree level than any other institution in the State of Illinois. Its accreditation by the National League for Nursing is to be reviewed in 1989, and planning in preparation for that review has been initiated. Planning is also in progress to develop provisions under which persons, whose responsibilities necessitate their full-time employment, may fulfill degree requirements in evening and weekend programs. Other flexible institutional responses to the educational needs and interests of Chicago-area citizens ranging from junior high school students to older and retired adults are represented through Extension Services, the Board of Governors Degree Program and the University Without Walls and Enrichment programs. We anticipate not only quantitative but also qualitative growth and development in all academic areas.

The latest addition to C.S.U. Academic growth is the Nursing Program. It has received full accreditation and will help serve the needs of the surrounding community. Major medical institutions in the Chicago area received our students for on the job training. Pictured are students at work.

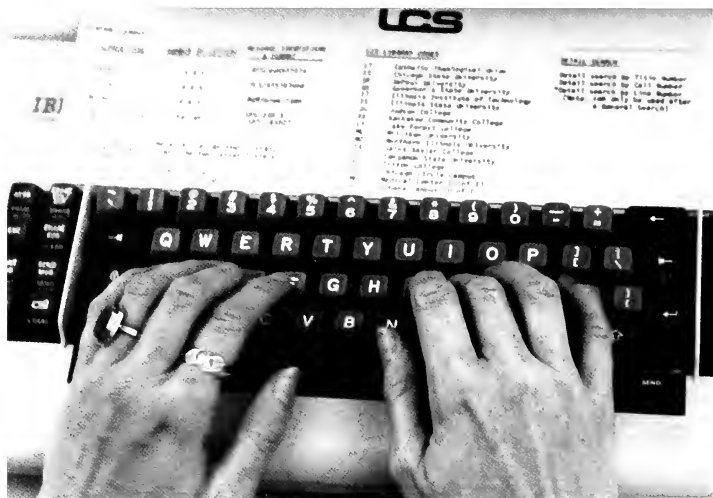

THE USE OF HANDS IN

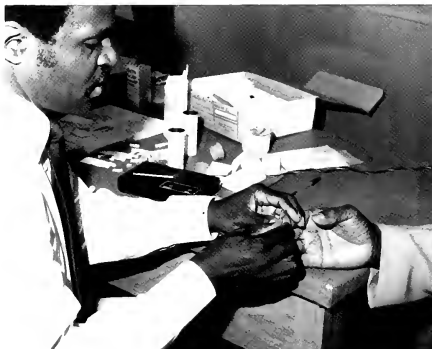

ACADEMIC EXPRESSION

Chicago State University hosts a multitude of community events each year. During the past year, Students participated in a bevy of extracurricular programs including the annual Senior Citizens Recognition Day, the CSU Blood Pressure and Health Screen Testing.

Alumni Reminisce

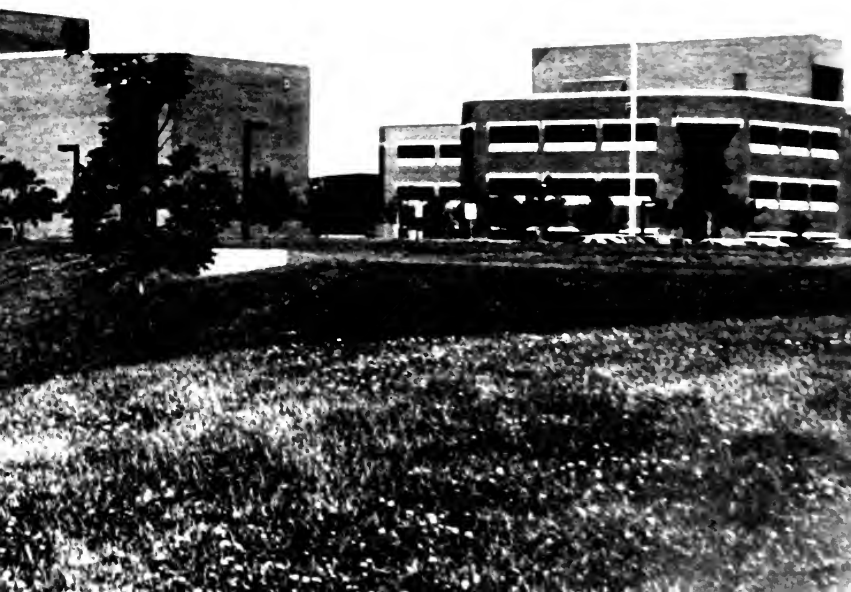

Proud of their alma mater, Alumni readily stopped to be photographed while touring the Douglas Library Building during the recent multi-class reunion.

Over the years, Chicago State University has come from a boxcar concept to the magnificent University it is now, and throughout its history, you, the alumni have played a major part in shaping the philosophy and direction it now has. The various legacies each administration has left behind created new visions for those of you to work with. Year after year, with each new thrust from a new administration, you, the alumni — 17,000 strong have created the positive image, dedication of time and money to carry on progressive programs brought forth by the administrators. As new graduates, you have joined forces with the alumni of the past. Memories of hard-won battles in exams, long sleepless hours of study should make you want to help others to become what you have become — alumni. Throughout the next few pages dedicated to you, there will be pictures of alumni — many still working to keep on a tradition of excellence. Remember, you are now a part of an ongoing program to create positive thought, dedication to loyalty and above all, to help mankind.

On September 22, 1984, Chicago State University celebrated its 8th Annual Multi-class Reunion representing over 5 decades, including current faculty members, many who are former students. President George Avers and a host of university representatives were present to greet guests. A review of slides brought back memories of yesteryear. A video showing allowed the audience to share President Avers tour of Zimbabwe. The real highlight of the evening was the presentation of the Distinguished Service Award to Ruby Larkins, Vice President of Pullman Bank and the CSU Distinguished Alumna Award to Dr. Margaret Burroughs, founder and President of the Dusable Museum.

Other distinguished guests were seated at the Avers Dinner.

Phonathon holds its own

"I enjoy the phonathon each year—talking to alumni, some of them long distance. I thought this time some might be unable to give since the Chicago teachers were striking, but everyone was so pleasant!" Dennis Gunn, the top phonathon volunteer for the second year with $8,426 in pledges explained why he Jolyn H. Robichaux, president of Baldwin Ice Cream Company, was the recent recipient of Chicago State University's Distinguished Alumna Award during Reunion 1984 sponsored by the Office of Alumni Affairs.

Addressing an enthusiastic audience of fellow graduates, Robichaux shared some of her experiences as a CEO, describing herself as an aggressive entrepreneur, an organizer, and one who learned how to make expedient decisions. Robichaux was cited as being "The Department in Illinois, Michigan and Indiana. Robichaux often prepared bakery items for still photography and television commercials. Her talent and prolific nature provided her with international exposure when she was assigned by the U.S. State Department to serve as nutrition consultant, lecturing to west African schools and civic groups on the value of good nutrition.

Robichaux graduated from Chicago State University with a bachelor of arts degree in elementary school education. She attended First University in Nashville, Tennessee, and obtained a certificate in ice cream technology from Pennsylvania State University.

Active in many community and professional organizations, Robichaux is president of Unity High School Advisory Board and former vice president of the Chicago Urban League Board of Directors. She has served on the board of directors of Chicago Community Ventures, Cooperation of Youth Enterprises and Teach One Teach One.

Phonathon gifts add up

Alumni contributions are often the key to the success of many university programs. Their contribution also provides additional measure of support which improves quality of service, that additional resource which both enhances and improves university programs. Such is the case in the variety library and in the day care center.

As the University grows, the challenges change, and prices increase, the challenge to alumni to provide significant support also grows. During the past year, the alumni contributed to the recent eighth Annual Phonathon conducted by the CSU Alumni Association for $384, however, set a record for the highest average gift ever per donor. It was marked the second largest amount of funds collected for any phonathon. In the first phonathon held in 1977, $14,581.50 was raised. The contributions had increased progressively until the fifth phonathon in 1981-82 brought in a record $35,562.65. This past year, the CSU alumni nearly reached that mark again with a total of nearly $36,000. Since 1977, alumni have raised $196,716.15 to support the programs of the alumni association.

The funds that were received this past year were allocated in the following manner: $18,420.96 for the alumni fund, $5,990.00 for library enrichment, $4,767.00 for student scholarships and loans, $3,607.00 for the Charter Club, $1,330.00 for the CSU Day Care Center and $1,005.95 for miscellaneous projects, among them faculty research, physical education and cultural affairs.

The number of 1983 donors was the second largest in the history of the phonathon. 1,422 alumni fulfilled the pledges that they made during the last fall's fund-raising effort.

Message from James M. Garnes

My special pleasure to greet each of you for the first time through Second Century. Coming to know Chicago is in my earliest conversations with members of the Vice Presidential Search and Screening Committee, I am impressed with the depth of concern for the future of the University. I am concerned with the strength of community and alumni involvement associated with Chicago State University. I am strongly influenced by my choice to be here. Therefore, may I take this opportunity to give you a brief report of the status of Chicago State University.

college-age students will be declining. Rising educational costs demand that we do everything possible to keep a Chicago State education within the economic reach and grasp of those who wish to attend this institution. For this reason, we will do all in our power to attract scholarship support for our students and to influence public policy calculated to protect freedom of choice by prospective students.

We face the future with a confidence born of a deep awareness of our history and the uniqueness of our contribution—past, present, and future—to higher education.

We face the future with confidence because we know the outstanding contributions which our University has made to the many publics which it is our privilege to serve. Leadership of our alumni has

The leadership role of the 1985 yearbook was one of the most challenging responsibilities I've had at CSU. My first thought was will I be able to handle the responsibilities of the leader who preceded me. After thinking it over and talking with friends and relatives, I was greatly encouraged to assume the responsibilities of the EMBLEM publication.

Although I didn't enter the job with an enormous amount of experience, I did approach this task with loyalty, dedication, and eagerness to learn. Under the leadership of Mr. Ruff, I learned how to work with the material one has, how to meet deadlines that sometimes seem impossible to meet, and how to produce a quality yearbook.

Thanks to Mr. Ruff and to all my friends and relatives who encouraged me to take the challenge. I especially want to thank Mr. Arthur Stephens (yearbook advisor) for believing in me when others doubted my abilities.

Last, but certainly not least, thanks be to God who makes all things possible.

"SEEK YE FIRST THE KINGDOM OF GOD"
AND HE WILL DIRECT THY PATH

VERNA J. THOMAS
EMBLEM EDITOR

ARTHUR L. STEPHENS
EMBLEM ADVISOR

Our privileged task brought with it the responsibility of producing a video-like Kaleidoscope of C.S.U. and its learning environment with a historical connection in an involved community.

Our first premise was putting the C.S.U. Yearbook of 1985 puzzle pieces, of the past year together interlocked, with the great history of C.S.U., and its challenge ... to survive in the 21st century ...

The administrators of the past who ran in the C.S.U. marathon of academic life, passed the baton to the present administrators, who will pass the baton to you the Alumni, our leaders of tomorrow.

Many of the students who joined our yearbook staff worked countless hours to put forth a creditable publication. Verna Thomas, editor had the foresight to prepare herself for this role through the guidance of former editor Ulysses Ruff. Ms. Thomas created a momentum of hard work for all the volunteers and staff. The pressure of deadlines, long hours and the visions of a great yearbook challenged the "strong" and eliminated the "weak".

The Yearbook of 1985 ran smoothly from the historical connection of the past century into the present 20th century. As we run the marathon in to the 21st century we challenge the Alumni, students and community to bring forth their visions, talent and perseverance to make this University reach out and touch ... first place in the Academic Community.
